A disinfectant cleaner is a product that cleans and kills (or inactivates) micro-organisms such as bacteria and viruses on inert surfaces such as floors, walls, seats, doorknobs, stretchers, etc..

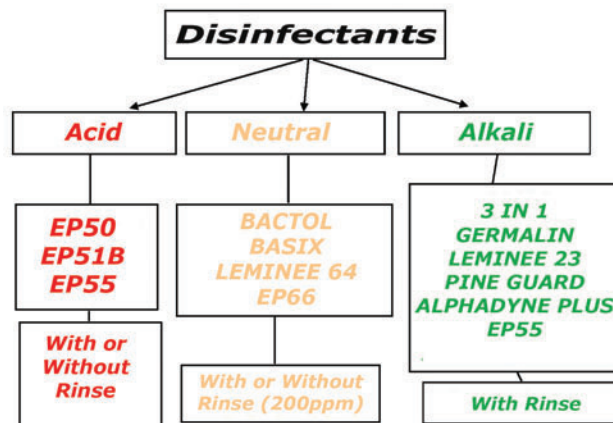

The Avmor disinfectant cleaners performs two actions:

- inhibiting the spread of germs;
- lethal action (kills) on germs.

We classify the cleaning products according to their pH level.

Avmor Disinfectant Cleaners Classification

Disinfectants are important in order to protect public health, however, overuse of these types of products are not recommended. The overuse of disinfectants contributes to the creation of increased bacterial resistant. It is recommended to reserve their use to areas where the risks of contamination are high, since often enough cleaning is sufficient.

It is important to always clean the surface prior to disinfecting. In order to obtain desired results ensure that procedures are followed as indicated and leave the product on for the recommended time. In order to choose the most appropriate disinfectant cleaner, take into account the type of soils that are present.

Different types of soils

Soils may be adherent (spots ...) or nonadherent (dust ...) and of different origin:

Soils of organic origins

Animals, vegetables or humain soils
Example: oil, grease, wine, blood, urine ...

Soils of mineral origin

Example: tartar, cement, plaster, rust.
These stains form a film on surfaces

How to Remove?

Soils of organic origins

- Deposits of protein and fat: use a degreaser between 6 and 8 pH.
- Cooked fats: use an alkaline degreaser between 9 and 12.5 pH
- Carbonized fats, grease, mechanic oil: use a high alkaline degreaser between 13.5 and 14 pH.
- Very Sweet Residues: use an acid detergent at 6 pH or less.

Soils of mineral origin

- Tartar (limestone): use an acid detergent at 6 pH or less
